BUCKHORN CREEK BARN

This classic looking, two story gambrel roof barn is in the foothills of Masonville, Colorado, and has a little of everything you may need. The lower level has four oversized hinged doors that release into a wide open area. It also has a lean-to on one side for storing equipment. A staircase leads to the 2nd floor which is spacious and can be used for additional storage. In addition, an outside loft door allows for easy access to the second floor. Two stalls open to the east, located under the second story providing shelter for animals. Rough sawn pine siding and tan shingles blend well with the country setting.
